Poor Governance Structure

- The incident reporting process was inconsistently applied. We found limited evidence of learning from incidents or complaints.
- Staff did not always record actions taken or learning points for incidents. The knowledge of incidents and awareness of shared learning was inconsistent.

- The trust must ensure governance systems are embedded in practice to provide a robust and systematic approach to improving the quality of services. This should capture relevant elements of good governance including an adopting a positive incident reporting culture where learning from incidents is shared with staff and embedded to improve safe care and treatment of patients.

Our Next Steps ...

Why should this be in every peri-op safety plan?

- Highly visible safety information will help to change culture
- Attractive way to disseminate safety information
- Easy to keep up to date
- Advertising works for industry
- So why not make it work for us?
